

Some Thoughts ...

I have had a couple deja vu moments the past week or so. By this I mean I am in the midst of a situation and have a flash of reality that the experience has already happened. (Though in this time-space frame - it would be impossible.) So, Tammy and I were talking about the topic ... is it a journey into the past, or the future? Neither - as the situation was neither past nor future - it was the present situation that was being repeated. Or maybe I should say - 'played out'.

Could it be that our experience on earth has already been played out? ... and we are simply dropped back into it? Tolle's book talks about heaven being reality and this life on earth being a dream. O.M.G. ... could it be? It is the only way to explain, really, a lot about life, and a lot about the Bible. We spend so much time agnostic towards God because life on earth seems so unfair ... babies aborted, genocide, tragedy, problems, birth defects, ... and some people being un-understandably rich, healthy, blessed. How could all this be fair? In a world where this is the dream and heaven is the reality - it is perfectly fair. We wake up from the dream in heaven - with a perfect body, with our true self, etc. Our experience 'here' was just a dream. Pretty vivid dream it seems - but a dream. What could be unfair about a dream? Good or bad?

And none of the above deletes 'free will' ... but certainly provides an explanation on pre-destination.

Okay - one step further - speaking in tongues. What happened when you, or I, first spoke in tongues, and do so today? Was it like some 'dentist' gaining physical control of our jaws, tongue, and vocal chords, and 'using' us? ... No, it came naturally from within. I didn't have to force it out - I just let it out. Could it be that speaking in tongues is a window into a life and language we already knew/know?!!! Could it be that the real me is loaded with languages, power, abilities, that I'm hardly aware of because of this (ugly) dream I'm in? I didn't learn the tongue - I simply started using it. Could it be that we are dropped onto this planet and from the word go we are talked into, seduced, forced, manipulated, and the like, into (living) roles in life that aren't even ourselves??? Jeff Filler isn't my real name - the Bible says that. So why would English be my real language? And Engineering isn't my real career/destiny. Maybe Paul is saying - yeah, don't just spout off - but also tune into (interpret) what the language is saying!

And now I wonder further how, perhaps, these gnostics in the time of the Early Church - may have been onto it.
