

Perhaps we are ashamed of Jesus (or are not vocal about our love for Him) ... because we are ashamed ... to love.

Love isn't `cool'. Unless it is for Football, or the current episode of Lost. (But even that love is more `cool' than true.)

Our ego is either too proud, or too broken, or too afraid to love.
Love anything. Or Anyone.

Our problem isn't the object of love, but the inability to love.

We can't love anything, or truly anyone, unless we learn to love everything, and everyone.
